GAMES WORKSHOP®

What is a Collectors' Guide?

The Orcs & Goblins Collectors' Guide is the definitive tome for anyone interested in the Orcs & Goblins miniatures range. It's ideal for anyone who collects Orcs & Goblins, containing the full range of Orcs & Goblins models and their component parts.

We've laid the range out following Warhammer Armies: Orcs & Goblins. All the Hero choices are in one section, followed by Core, Special and Rare units. We hope this will make it easier for you to navigate through and find the models or components you are looking for.

The Orcs & Goblins Collectors' Guide is far more than a simple catalogue, also included within are a number of other features such as painted examples of Orcs & Goblins tribal colours, some fantastic armies painted and collected by Games Workshop staff, conversions, Golden Demon winners and great dioramas.

So if you collect, paint or game with the Orcs & Goblins then this is the book for you.

Anyway what are you waiting for, stop reading this and take a look inside.

Orc Tribes of the Old World

Orc Tribes of the Old World

What follows is a treatise on the various clans, tribes and gatherings of the foul Greenskins that are found in the lost and lonely places of the Old World.

The Iron Claw Orcs

Possibly the most notorious of the Orc tribes due to a single Orc by the name of Gorbad Ironclaw. Between 1707 and 1712 he led quite possibly the largest Waaagh! ever known into the Empire, his armies leaving the entire eastern half of the Empire in ruins.

Blue dags decorate the arms of the members and they take anything and everything they can when they go to war. The men and women of the Empire still tell stories of Gorbad to mischievous children who misbehave, as in 'Gorbad will fetch you away in the night'.

The Broken Tooth

The Black Orcs claim dominance over the Broken Teeth in the Eastern Mountains and expect all to match their prowess. Even the Goblins are put through their paces. Any Goblin who can't hit a target at twenty paces gets strapped to the target for the next Goblin to try and hit, any Goblin that can't run faster than an Orc gets eaten (almost normal behaviour) and any Wolf Rider unable to control his mount becomes pet food.

Since the 'Egstensiv trainin program' the Goblin troops of the Broken Tooth clan have become almost average. Very high praise indeed.

The Bloody Hand Tribe

The Bloody Hand tribe claims the western foothills of the Badlands. The clan is known for their frequent raids into Tilea and Araby making them one of the richest of all Orc clans.

Whole tribes of Trolls and Giants flock to their red dagged standard in the hope of 'teef' and all the 'Umies' they can eat. When the Bloody Hand tribe goes on their annual raids, or 'Olidayz', their vanguard troops are the infamous 'Wagon Trains' of massed Pump wagons that blaze a trail for the Bloody Hands to follow.

The White Orcs

Amongst the Orcs, the White Orcs inspire some of the most insulting songs from the Dwarves as, for hundreds of years, they have stood guard at the base of the Silver Road heading to Mount Grimfang, mercilessly ambushing almost all caravans travelling its length.

As a result the Dwarves have found new ways to reach their goal and tunnelled to Mad Dog Pass. However, in an unlikely use of intelligence the White Orcs have split their force into two, making full use of their Wolf Riders as Scouts to direct the units of Orc infantry, and archers and the Night Goblin allies to intercept the new trade route.

The Blue-Faced Orcs

The Blue-Faced Orcs are the scourge of the Black Gulf, with their Pirate fleets preying on shipping between Araby and the Border Princes. The clan infamously launched a massive naval Waaagh! or 'Orcmada' with the aid of the Scabby Eye Goblins but unfortunately left the only Orc with a compass back at port.

After sailing in circles for three months the clan returned having eaten all but three of their Goblin allies. Since then Trolls have been seen in the Blue-Faced fleets but no Goblins, after all even Goblins aren't stupid enough to trust this clan again.

The Red Fang Orcs

Unlike many of the Orc and Goblin tribes that litter the Badlands, the Red Fangs hold no land as their own. Instead they travel through the low plateaus of the Southlands following the great boars, which they use as the bulk of their forces. Each young Orc must venture forth and single-handedly hunt, capture and train his own porcine mount. Only when this has been done are they allowed to paint one of their own tusks red and take a position in the tribe.

Despite their nomadic existence, which has attracted Savage Orcs to their banner, they return annually to the plateau below Karak Eight Peaks to drink, fight and plan the next year's raids.

Bone Nose Savage Orcs

In the southern swamps near the Misty Mountains lie the most aggressive tribe of Savage Orcs. Pushed ever onward in search of the 'One and Future Git' by their leader Wurzag, and made up exclusively of Savage Orcs, with no war machines or even Goblins, Giants or Trolls, this tribe rampages through the swamplands, tearing asunder any that oppose their 'Kroosade'.

White Skulls Savage Orcs

Known as the White Skulls due to the emblem of a skull painted on their bodies, this Savage Orc tribe and their Greenskin allies often make forays into Araby where they find the sun does very strange things to them indeed. Mostly using their Savage Boar Boyz, the Goblins are used to hold up the enemy so that the mounted riders can slam into the sides of enemy units.

Snake Blood Savage Orcs

One of the truly nomadic Savage Orc tribes, they follow the random migrations of the Oooyabegga Snake who's venom they imbibe in a drink called 'Snakebite', the results of which send them into such a mad frenzy that even Black Orcs find it awe inspiring.

They have picked up numerous Night Goblins along the way as they regard Squigs and Fanatics as kindred spirits in the pursuit of battle-madness.

Savage Orcs of the Open Maw

The Open Maw has quite possibly the largest tribe of Trolls ever known in an Orc tribe. The tribal leaders have tried more times than any Orc can count to rid themselves of these cumbersome monsters, but to no avail. The numbers of Goblins and Snotlings in the tribe seemed to drop mysteriously around the same time the Trolls appeared, and the Orcs became concerned these unwelcome guests would end up eating all their reinforcements.

Resigning to the fact that the Trolls will not leave them alone, they have decided to use them in their attacks, hiding units behind ranks of Stone Trolls to gain some protection from missile fire and magic.

Goblin Tribes of the Old World

The Red Face Goblins

Renowned for their mad, often suicidal, charges down the slopes of the North Eastern Mountains this Goblin tribe make full use of 'tactics', which has led them to more success than most other clans.

Arrer Boyz will line the ridges, pelting the enemy with arrows, whilst Stone Trolls and Pump wagons charge the front, sewing panic and destruction.

Red painted tattoos on faces make this lot feel 'Ded 'Ard'.

The Scabby Eye Goblins

This tribe of Goblins make full use of the Badlands' flatness by using a mass of Wolf Riders and Chariots. They are an aggressive tribe that dislike all Orcs due to an incident with the Blue-Faced Orcs years ago. They constantly raid against the Orcs of this tribe in a bitter bid for revenge.

The Crooked Moon

Of all the Night Goblin clans the Crooked Moon is by far the most notorious. Led by Skarsnik, the tribe has known great success. By only employing Night Goblins he has managed to keep control and any rivals are soon put down with the help of his Cave Squig Gobbler.

It was under Skarsnik that the Crooked Moon massacred the Dwarven defenders at the Battle of East Gate and now holds sway of Karak Eight Peaks, often driving back Dwarven reinforcements as easily as chucking Snotlings.

Yellow Eye Goblins

Lurking within the Border Princes lie the Yellow Eye Goblins, a tribe led exclusively by Shamans. Their lands sit at the southern end of Blackfire Pass and they use it as their gateway to the farms and villages of Averland. Many Empire villages have come to fear the sight of these wolf-borne raiders and it is for this reason (not mere superstition) that Averlanders fear the wolves' howl in the night. Making use of Wolf Riders and Chariots this tribe rely on hit and run tactics to confuse and outmanoeuvre their opponents before letting the Squigs run riot, wreaking havoc through the beleaguered enemy.

The One Eye Goblins

The One Eyes exist in one of the most inhospitable places in the Badlands. Bordered to the south by the Blind River, the lands of the One Eye are a hotbed of thermal activity. The geysers of this area have led to large growths of fungi and Snotling colonies are commonplace.

Due to this large food source the One Eyes have expanded which has led to conflict between them and the Crooked Moon tribe. The result of this is that an undeclared state of war exists between the two tribes and any Night Goblins spotted are immediately attacked and brought back to the camps to be added to that night's menu.

Bloody Spear Night Goblins

The Bloody Spears are real opportunists. Sitting at each end of the Old Dwarf Silver Road they have found rich pickings from the beleaguered Dwarf convoys. Many a Dwarf caravan, having survived the attacks of the White Orcs who hunt in the pass, will come stumbling out of the mountains, weary and battered, only to be set upon by the Bloody Spear raiding party.

They are so wealthy from the spoils of war that Orcs and Trolls have been known to flock to them in the hope of wealth and war.

Broken Axe Goblins

One of Orcdom's most famous leaders, 'Grom the Paunch', was the leader of this tribe and led an almost successful Waaagh! against the Empire, crushing all in his way until his fleet was blown towards the High Elves where his army fell, although Grom's final fate is unknown.

His name lives on through the tribe's war songs, as do his tactics, making full use of war machines, cavalry and massed Goblin infantry. They still deserve the fearsome reputation that Grom carved out for them.

Orc Scenery

One of the great joys of collecting an army is personalising scenery for it. Although your Orc army can defend any old castle in a siege game, wouldn't it be great if they defended a converted Orc castle? Here we show you some of the wealth of scenery built by hobbyists around the world.

The watchtower is based on this model, originally made as a marker for a campaign map.

Don't be daunted by the more complex structures. This Orc hut was made from a simple cardboard tube covered in old pieces of fabric!

This Goblin Watchtower was built by Jeremy Vetock from the US. White Dwarf team, and is a real grand undertaking! Building on a single Warhammer Fortress tower, this centrepiece is encrusted with detail, including Snotlings, Squigs and mushrooms poking out of every nook and cranny!

This Orc galleon was developed by the US. White Dwarf team to use in their campaigns, but a docked boat could quite easily be the focal point of a siege game.

The 'Eavy Metal model makers created these pieces for the 2000 release of Warhammer Armies: Orcs & Goblins. Interesting details include the enemy weapons & shields scattered around the structures.

This section of an Orc castle was done by adding 'Orc' touches to a Warhammer Fortress wall.

Dioramas

The anarchic and characterful nature of the Orcs & Goblins army is reflected in both the rules and the background of this race. This inspires many gamers and hobbyists to create dioramas to illustrate this. Enjoy these inspirational pieces!

Conversions

Orcs and Goblins are battlefield scavengers. They are also fanatical trophy collectors. These two facts make Orcs and Goblins an ideal base for modellers who wish to personalise their models or army. The similarity between the Warhammer Orc range and the Warhammer 40,000 Ork range gives hobbyists a veritable cornucopia of components with which to create their masterpieces. Take a look at some of these inspired (insane?) creations!

SHOWCASE

Ade West's Night Goblin Horde

This impressive collection took Ade 2 years to complete!

Ade's paint scheme is unique for Night Goblins in that he doesn't use Chaos Black or Goblin Green! The robes are undercoated with Midnight Blue which is then highlighted with a mix of Regal Blue and Ultramarines Blue, before the final highlight of Ultramarines Blue. The skin starts with Snot Green, moving up with a mix of Snot Green and Scorpion Green before a final highlight of Scorpion Green.

The highlight of this army has to be the massive Rock Lobber conversion. Based on both the Warhammer Siege Tower and several Orc Boar Chariots, this centrepiece model also employs metal & plastic Night Goblin models, a Squig catapult and Snotlings at the wheels! (The Rock Lobber is featured in all its glory on page 71).

Ade is taking a well-earned break from Goblins for the moment, but who knows? When the Waaagh! is called, who can resist...?

Using the Dwarf King Alrik's shield and two converted plastic Night Goblin shield bearers, Ade has created a real sense of regency in this Goblin Warboss (based on the Night Goblin Shaman model).

This Goblin Wolf Chariot is in fact the Orc Chariot with some subtle conversions, Vampire Counts Dire Wolves and the original Goblin crew.

SHOWCASE

Ben Brooks' Waaagh! Badsnik

Back in '99 I was getting tired of losing games with my Beastmen army and decided it was time for a change. There's loads of variety in the Warhammer range, but I'm a sucker for themed armies and the Night Goblins just called to me.

Of course collecting Night Goblins would mean painting lots of them. I wanted the army to look good but didn't want to spend forever painting them, so I decided to paint the bulk of each model quickly and spend more time on the focal point of the models – the face and skin. The robes were just given a quick ink and drybrush, whilst the skin was given three layered highlights using progressively lighter mixes of Snot Green and Sunburst Yellow.

I think the overall effect works well and although they took longer to paint than I had planned, I still got 2,000 pts painted in time to fight in the staff tournament that year. Some thought went into the assembly of the models too. I started using regiment bases to help the units rank up easily but soon realised that they made a great platform for some mini dioramas (see opposite page).

My favourite unit, however, is Hank, the tattooed Giant.

He's one of the few things in my army which genuinely scares my opponents.

Night Goblins are far from the most successful army I've ever collected, but they're easily the most fun, and when I actually DO win with them... well, when that happens, I'll let you know!

Ben's various Goblin Bosses, Big Bosses and Shaman display individual touches, from finely picked out details, to extensive conversion work.

Ben has ensured that even the rank-and-file troops capture the anarchic mood of a Greenskins army with these chaotic conversions from his Night Goblin regiments.

SHOWCASE

Gordon Davidson's Greenskins Army

Gordon Davidson is certainly no stranger to Games Workshop publications, being a real driving force behind the Design Studio and a fanatical Orc player for many years. He featured in White Dwarf in many of the battle reports that coincided with the launch of Warhammer Armies: Orcs & Goblins book. Ironically, this is the first time his own personal army has been showcased!

All the classic Greenskin tactics are covered, with large blocks of units, Fanatics hidden within Night Goblin mobs along with the more exotic troops like the crazed Pump Wagon and the Giant armed with a Halfling flail (see opposite page).

Gordon's converted Goblin Wolf Chariot.

Gordons' army is a mix of classic models and current range, ensuring that the anarchic and non-uniform character of the Orcs is carried over into the look of both his troops and the character models.

Being a fanatic hobbyist, the army is not yet completed in Gordon's eyes. More and more Orcs & Goblins escape from his painting table every day, so expect to see a tidal wave of new Greenskins any day now!

The base features an unsuccessful Doom Diver.

Three very unfortunate Halflings!

Gordon's converted Giant.

SHOWCASE

Sebastian Hammar's Orcs & Goblins Army

Although primarily a gamer's army, Sebastian has converted many of his units so that they look great as well as being practical for gaming.

His Squig unit is a great example of his army on the whole, mixing both current range models with some absolute classics. As well as his bouncing Squigs (suspended on sewing needles!) and his Warboss mounted on a classic Wyvern, Seb has gone so far as to include bowstrings on his Savage Orc Arrer Boyz!

Sewing needles support Seb's flying Squig Hoppers.

Seb's Troll-powered Rock Lobber mounted on, of all things, an old CD!

Golden Demon Winners

Every year sees Golden Demon painting competitions all over the world and every year sees scores of talented hobbyists further pushing up the level of skill and workmanship in the frankly jaw-dropping models entered. The Orcs & Goblins army provides one of the richest palettes in the Warhammer world and, as you can see, there can be dozens of models but there won't ever be two alike!

This Black Orc, the warboss Badruk 'Eadspitta, was the promotional model for Games Day 2000. This limited edition model is no longer available and has become a real collectors' piece!
